[SPECIAL TO THE EVENIN WORLD] Indianapolis, Sept. 26.—The Bostons are rived here to-day to find as mad a lot of Hoosiers as ever pranced about a ball field, all on account of the insulting telegrams sent by alleged friends of the Beaneaters, accusing the Indianapolitans of throwing games to New York.

The home team went into the field with the intention of avenging these insults, as well as giving the Bostonians a lesson in baseball.

Boyle and Daily were the home battery. The visitors presented the irrepressible Clarkson and his Bennett.

GOELZ IN A NEW LIGHT.

Lewis M. Creighton, of 45 West Washington square, was the first witness before Referee Douras, in the Common Pleas Court to-day, in the case of Charles Giblin, condemned to death for killing Madeline Goelz.

He testified that he saw the struggle in Goelz's bakery, at 162 West Houston street, and saw a pagery, at 162 west Houston street, and saw a man trying to get out of the place with something in his hand, but he could not tell whether it was a revolver or a five-dollar bill. Air. Creighton gave similar testimony on the trial. Lawyer Suydam, who defended the prisoner on his trial, said that he saw Mirs. Lucy Nelson after Giblin's conviction, having learned that she and her daughters had important facts about the case, but she refused to appear as a witness, nor would she permit her daughters to do so.

Mr. Spydam further stated that at the infima-ion of Judge Barrett no evidence was offered as to the five-dollar bill which Giblin offered to valcutine Goelz, and said to be a counterfeit Thomas Moran, a cigar merchaut, of Worcos-ter, Mass., testified to the good character of

SENIOR-PRESTON. -At the residence of the officiat-ing clergyman, Rev. R. Wasson, 319 East 4th st., on the 22d inst., Mr. John Charles Senios, of San Francisco, Cal., to Miss MARY ELLEN PRESTON

Tis love that makes the world go round. There is the text for a neat little sermon on fidelity in the marriage notice printed above. On Saturday night, at nearly 10 o'clock, there were two vigorous, business-like pulls of the bell at the residence of Rev. Robert Wasson pastor of the Second Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

The good parson responded in person. He was in gown and slippers and was about to retire. He found on his doorstep two young men. one of whom, addressing him, said: "We have just arrived from San Francisco and I want to be married." Parson Wasson instinctively peered beyond the two young men into the darkness, but seeing no bride-elect in the gloaming asked: "Do you

"Ha! I should like that, but my sweetheart, who was to have arrived at 7 o'clock this evening on the steamship Umbria, from England, will not be here until to-morrow morning, and I desire to start on my return to California at 3.30 to-morrow afternoon."

This was all stated in a gentlemanly, businesslike manner and nearly took the minister's breath away.

Here was a swain who had but a half hour before stepped off the cirs after a journey of 3, 200 miles, come to neet the woman of his choice from an ocean voyage of nearly 3, 000, and impatient to start with her for their future home at the Golden Gate, making a total and almost continuous journey for all parties of more than 6,000 miles!

Mr. Wasson, after a moment, advised less haste. He pointed out that the coming bride must be wearied and perhaps had suffered from mad de mer. Then he said: "I will give you your choice of three hours for your wedding—9,30, 12,30 or 4 oclock."

The impatient wain consulted his friend and finally conceded a little rest to his bride and named 12,30 as the hour. Then he left, and the parson noted that the young men were on foot.

Fromptly at 12,30 Sunday the young men reappeared, and on the arm of the friend of the groom-elect hung a delightful young Englishwoman.

appeared, and on the arm of the friends of groom-elect hung a delightful young Englishwoman.

They had walked from a little hotel in West street some three miles to the houss of Rev. Mr. Wasson, whose name the groom had selected from the City Directory at random.

And Mr. Wasson is an Englishman, too, In his little parlor John Charles Senior, thirty years of age, English by hirth and an American for two years, and Mary Eleas Freston, twenty-five years of age, and of London, were made man and wife, with Thomas Stevens as best man and Miss Grace Wasson, daughter of the officiating clergyman, and her guest, Miss Winnie Thompson, of Bermuda, as witnersex.

The groom and best man were dressed in dark cutaway coats and sunty and the groom were eye-glasses. He is a bookkeeper. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of pure white. She was of medium height, slight and modes. Her hair was dark and invariant; her eyes were soft, full and dark, and there was an extasy of happiness pervading the two who had been faithful to their troth, though separated by 0,000 miles of land and sea for more than two years.

which had given cause for any anxiety.

"Happy the bride the sun shines on," say the oid lines, and everybody wishes it might shine on the bride of to-day.

However, there are no fears that the rain and clouds hold aught of omen for those whose futer lestinics will henceforth be united.

I e village was brilliantly illuminated last night in honor of the event to come. The villagers hearts are illuminated to-day with bright good wishes for the bright pair.

Miss McCormick chose this place for her wedding, rather than her own city of Chicago, because it has long been her favorite Summer resting-place, and because she delights in its natural beauty, especially manifest at this Autumn season of the year.

The villagers are all her friends, and many of them were remembered with kind invitations to day to come and see the cormony in the

X. V. Wholmes, talks se carnessiy to his people.

Mr. Holmes, under whose ministrations Miss McCormick has set on many a quiet Sunday in the pretty church, was selected to perform to-day's ceremony in conjunction with the Rev. Dr. Herrick Johnson, the bride's Chicago pastor.

The prearranged programme for the ceremony included the following details:

Miss McCormick and her mother, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrns H. McCormick, ir., and Harold McCormick to be driven from Clayton Lodge to the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Cyrns H. McCormick to lead his sister to the attar, there to be met by Mr. Emmons Blaine, entering from the left aftar door. Walker Blaine was chosen the best man and it was decided not to have any bridesmands. The scaler chosen were T. A. Reep and Harold Buckerfalls.

Secretary Blaine was very prominent during the movering preparations. He appeared in a handsome suit of gray Scotch goods, gray overgatiers, g pair of well polished shoes and a brown derly hat.

The wedding guests from other places, chiefly quartered at the Springs House, include the following:

The church interior was also handsomely decorated with flower and plants.

The marriage ceremony, occurring at noon, was very brief, being completed at 12.15.

The bride wore a dress that was simple in style, but of exquisite material.

The entire front was of Valenciennes lace, meeting a train of white satin, with fichn of lace, the style of Marie Antoinette, folding softly about the throat.

The seleves were made of soft lace, reaching to the wrist. The vell was caught up by a cornet of orange blossoms.

After the ceremony the newly wedded pair entered their carriage and were driven to the McCormick cottage, where the table was set for the wedding breakfast. At 2.15 they left for Bar Harbor.
